JudoScotland Adapted & Vision Impaired Judoka Divisioning Criteria

Sport-specific divisioning in Judo is crucial for fostering fair competition and maximising athletes' potential. By categorising participants based on weight, skill level, age, and gender, divisioning ensures balanced matches, reducing the risk of injury and promoting safety. It allows judokas to compete against peers of similar abilities, enhancing the competitive experience and encouraging skill development. This tailored approach supports athletes' confidence and progression, making the sport more inclusive and accessible. Moreover, it helps in identifying talent and potential at various levels, ultimately contributing to the overall growth and excellence in the sport of Judo. JudoScotland aims to implement a divisioning system that is both fair and specific to Judo, ensuring a clear understanding of athlete categorization. Our primary objectives are safety, fairness, and the overall quality of the event.

Judo Movement	Judo Nage Komi	Judo - Randori	Judo - Terminology
Judoka must demonstrate	Judoka must demonstrate	Judoka must demonstrate	Judoka must demonstrate
Ukemi - forward/back wards	Two standing forward techniques of their choice.	One-minute randori style practice. Randori practice must incorporate Tachi Waza and Newaza	Understanding of Judo terminology and contest rules
Tsugi Ashi movement around a designated area	Two standing combination techniques using Ashi Waza of their choice
Shadow Uchi Komi movement incorporating forward, backward and combination techniques	One standing combination technique linked Nezawa technique

JudoScotland aims to implement a divisioning system that is both fair and specific to Judo, ensuring a clear understanding of athlete categorisation. Our primary objectives are safety, fairness, and the overall quality of the event. In terms of safety, JudoScotland' s divisioning assessors have the right to halt any stage of the assessment if they believe a player is at risk.
